

Ready to release - Stage 3

The rehabilitation pool is the final stage for our rescued pups, this is the last stage of their recovery and where we move the pups who are ready to be released back into the wild!

The pups in this pool are now healed of any wounds, recovered from any illnesses and are now at the perfect weight to be ready to thrive in the wild.

When releasing pups, we transfer the pups from this pool into the back of our seal release trailer and then safely transport the pups to their release location. We try to release pups back to a beach on the coast that they were rescued from.

Rehabilitation is not always easy, some pups come to us in a very bad way, so to see the transformations some of the pups go through is incredible.

Seal pups cost on average £2000 to go through rehabilitation – and this doesn't include those that require specialist care. We are grateful for any donation received. Your money could go a long way to helping our animals get the care they really need.

If you would like to donate towards our pup rehabilitation, there are several donation points around the site, or you can make a donation at our gift shop/ reception area.
